Shopping Tips For Teens

[The article below is the first in a series of articles to help teenagers shop for clothing. The articles were written as an assignment in the Home Ec. Occupational Clothing class at ACHS.]

by Mary Ferguson

Today, teenagers often have the privilege to buy on credit as most adults do. To keep this privilege, a teenager needs to learn to use credit wisely. Teenagers should only buy on credit when they really need something and know they will be able to pay the debt at a later date when the bill is received. If a person credits something and then decides he or she can not pay for it, her credit rating will suffer. A person establishes his credit rating when he first starts to charge items, therefore it is important not to do anything to have a bad rating.

When you buy something, you should always check the label. It is important to know what the garment is made of and how you must care for it. Sometimes we buy things for everyday then find they must be dry cleaned after each use. A smart shopper will read the label before purchasing anything.

Advertising is often good to let us know sale prices and items that are available but it can also make us buy things we don't really need if we're not careful. It pays to read advertisements and evaluate them to see if they are offering something useful at a good price you can afford. Advertisements are a good way to compare stores for the prices and merchandise each store has. We can save money if we shop at different stores before we buy something unless the money we spend for gas is more than what we save. A lot of stores have the same items but at different prices. One reason for this is the markup a store has to make because of the services it offers, the salaries paid to its employees, the quantity sold, the number of employees and facilities provided by the store. One of the best ways to compare prices is to check the price of a brandname product at different stores.

Most girls today know how to sew or can take home economics in school to learn. It is usually cheaper to construct something than buy it and often the quality of what we make is better than what we buy already made.

There is another term that can be used to help teenagers buy things they want but don't have the money to purchase at the time. This is called layaway. When you layaway something you are paying a down payment on something you want and they will hold that item for you. Whenever you layaway something be sure you know when the payments are due and that you will have money to make your payments on time. If you don't make payments, the money you already paid will be lost to the store and your garment will be replaced on the rack for someone else to purchase.

If you remember these tips when shopping, you will become a better shopper and save more money.

Raiderettes Stunned Rustburg, Brookville

Appomattox County High School girl's basketball team is finding the going tougher as the perennial whole District champions have a record fall to 3-4 after a pair of games last week.

Friday night the Raiderettes fell victim to the charging Rustburg Red Devilettes, 48-36, as the Queen Bees of Rustburg edged Appomattox 48-46 the following night.

Against Rustburg, making a return visit to the district player of the year honors, led Appomattox with 16 points in both games as she outscored Rustburg's defense for 32 points, and put on a one woman show at Brookville with 31 points.

Against Rustburg Cindy Hogan scored eight points, Jan Hall added seven and Carla Hall and Connie Murray and Linda McArthur each scored two markers. Vicki Charlton led the Rustburg attack with 18 points while Kathy Mitchell scored 10 and Patti Carden added six.

Cindy Hogan led the balanced Brookville effort with 11 points, Jo Ellen Whitmore tossed in eight points and Val Merchant added seven to help the Queen Bees gain their fourth victory against three defeats.

Debbi McIvor scored two and Jan Stanley added three to account for the rest of the Appomattox scoring against Brookville.

Appomattox made a tremendous comeback in the Brookville game after trailing 12-6 at the end of the first quarter, 16-14 at the half and 27-23 as the third stanza ended, but even a 13 point, fourth quarter effort by Maryjane Smith could not close the gap.

Southern States Calls For Congressional Action

Supplies of natural gas will be made available soon, but there will be an acute shortage of fertilizer this spring with the result higher food prices, John J. Feland, general manager of Southern States Cooperative, Southern States is the major fertilizer manufacturer and distributor in a nine state area, supplying about 20% of the fertilizer tonnage used in Virginia.

Feland's warning came on the heels of an announcement that Commercial Chemical Company's nitrogen manufacturing plant in Tunis, N.C., had been shut down due to a shortage of natural gas. Southern States is a part owner of the complex which receives 55% of its nitrogen requirements from it.

Natural gas is essential to the manufacture of nitrogen which in turn, is an indispensable ingredient in practically all fertilizers used for food production. Making all the nitrogen products used in this nature requires about 2% of total U. S. natural gas [illegible]

Besides having an adverse effect on food costs, a shortage of fertilizer will mean worsening food shortages and a further deterioration in the nation's balance of payments situation, Feland said.

"What is needed is immediate action by Congress and the Federal Power Commission to make good on government pledges made earlier to the effect that farmers should have the natural and fertilizer they need to produce the food that's needed," the co-op official declared.

He cited Senate Resolution No. 89 which directed that "The Federal Power Commission and appropriate state regulatory agencies do everything within their power, in the establishment of priorities for the allocation of natural gas . . . to insure producers . . . with supplies of natural gas sufficient to maintain maximum production levels."

In addition, Feland said, President Ford on Oct. 15 promised "every farmer the fuel and fertilizer he needs to do the job."

The North Carolina Natural Gas Corporation, supplier of gas to the Tunis plant, has petitioned the Federal Power Commission for relief.

RAIDERETTES LOSE

Raiders Defeated

Appomattox County High School suffering from lack of experience and height was out muscled by the Jefferson Forest Cavaliers as the Raiders dropped a 54-58 decision in a Seminole District Basketball game Tuesday night.

David Read scored 21 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to pace the Cavalier attack while Enoch Robinson led the Raiders with 14 points.

Despite a fine 25 point effort by Maryjane Smith and six points by Cindy Smith, Jefferson Forest's girls pulled off a 52-42 victory over the Raiderettes to remain undefeated and atop the district standings.

In the boys game Mite Eggleston added 10 points for Appomattox, Mike Lewis scored 10 and David Kelso and Hal Smith each had two.

The Raiders attempted a comeback in the fourth quarter when they outscored the Cavaliers 20-15, but the rebounding strength of the taller Jefferson Forest quintent was too much for Appomattox to counter.

Steve Callahan had 13 markers for the Cavaliers and Arthur Read added seven and pulled down a game high 14 rebounds. Forest held a 44-28 edge in the rebounding department.

The Forest girls were led by Cathy Camden and Faith Pollard with 14 points each and Sheila Branch with 11. The loses leaves the rebuilding Raiderettes with a 3-5 mark while Forest is 8-0.

The Raiders have won only two of the 11 games and face one of their former victims Friday night when they travel to Naruna to battle the William Campbell Generals. The Raiderettes host Amherst River in their next contest January 25 in Appomattox.
